Don't Be Careless About What You Eat

You are either going to the right or wrong grocery shop. That's for you to decide, not us.

But don't be satisfied with goods only partly right, because that's being careless about what you eat. And nothing pays bigger dividends than pure groceries. While few things waste it faster than the other kind.

Consider this an invitation to try the economy of our eatables.

We promise you a courteous pleasing service and the best that your money can buy in groceries, today, tomorrow and always.

Your Valuable Papers Kept Safely

Somewhere around the house you have valuable papers, jewelry or priceless heirlooms. Some day you may come home and find them gone. Countless millions of dollars have been lost in this way. Is it worth while to risk loss by fire, thieves or rats when you can have absolute safety through our SAFE DEPOSIT BOXES at a small price? Whatever is placed in one of these boxes rests in absolute security until taken out by the owner—no one else can open the box, for you keep the key. You can have one of these boxes and in it keep your contracts, insurance policies, deeds, stocks and bonds, abstracts and receipts and so on. Business houses can use them for the overflow from their safes, and save buying a new safe. These boxes are kept in a fire-and burglar-proof vault.

Editor Harry C. Smith of the Campbell Interurban Press was one of the Orchard City Masons who attended the district meeting at Hollister last week, and the brethren had to chain him to the leg of the banquet table and make him eat.—Los Gatos Mail.

We think it was hardly etiquette on the part of Brother Smith to try to queer our good reputation in this way.

Why We Should Incorporate

It is conceded by all that Campbell must incorporate before long anyway.

Fire protection is an absolute necessity in any town that expects grow and encourage the building of homes.

The management of home government by home men is a point much desired. All funds expended are closely watched by those interested in the public good. The best way for a town to get on the map, so to speak, is to incorporate. Then the name has a significance more than simply a more or less thickly populated district.

Ordinances for the protection of the citizens such as, impounding orders, dog ordinances, and the like are possible in a corporate town.

The petitions being circulated on the corporation proposition, are being well signed, each signer showing his position when he signs. Thus far the incorporationists have a slight advantage but it is nobody's victory as yet.

The F. A. A. held a social aftermath Saturday evening at the hall. District Pres. Simpkins and Mr. Hinds of San Jose were present at lodge and gave interesting talks. At the social hour Mrs. Mendel read the story of her trip to England. H. C. Smith sang a solo followed by a cute little solo by little Lilian Gard. After the program refreshments of ice cream and cake were served in the banquet room. Dancing continued till 12.

Arnot-Darling

A pretty wedding was solemnized Thursday afternoon, when Nellie J. Arnot and Paul L. Darling were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents on Sunnyside.

The ceremony which occurred at 2:30 P. M., was performed by Rev. Geo. E. Atkinson in the presence of the immediate family and the groom's mother, who had come up from Los Angeles recently. Miss Dodson was also present. The house was banked with roses and the couple took their places to the music of Dancy's "Wedding Bells," played by Miss Myrtle Arnot.

The bride was very becomingly gowned in white voile and wore orange blossoms, which was exchanged for a traveling suit of gray. The groom was attired in the conventional garb.

Following the congratulations, light refreshments were served, and the bridal couple left on the 4:30 train for a trip in the Santa Cruz mountains, visiting Ben Lomond and other points. Later they will go to Los Angeles to make their home. Mr. and Mrs. Darling are friends of long standing, as Mr. Darling was a former resident of this community, having had a ranch on Hamilton Avenue, and served as S. P. agent at Santa Clara. A few years since, he removed to Los Angeles where he is engaged in the real estate business. He is a man of strong Christian character and has a prosperous business outlook.

Mrs. Darling is very widely-known here having a very gracious personality, and as widely liked. Her girlhood was spent at Alexandria, Minnesota, but for a number of years her family has lived on Sunnyside. Since her return from seven years missionary work in West Africa she has given a number of very interesting talks about the work there in which she was intensely interested.

A host of good wishes will follow the newly married couple to their home and Campbell's loss will be Los Angeles' gain.

June 6th is the day set for the High School Cantata to be given by the Glee Club.

The upper grades at the Grammar School will enjoy a picnic at Alum Rock Park tomorrow.

The S. S. classes of Rev. Atkinson and Mrs. Stoller will hold their annual picnic at Alum Rock Park.

Everything is "track" at the High now making preparations for the A. A. L. meet at Palo Alto, May 10th.

We are indebted to Mrs. Geo. Whitney and Mrs. Dunphy for two beautiful rose boquets that decorate the Press office. Thank you.

Mrs. John Preston was brought home from the hospital Monday afternoon and is improving slowly, being able to sit up for a short time each day.

Chester C. Archibald came from Reno Saturday for a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Archibald. He is following the trade of Isaac Walton these days with more or less success.

Miss Nellie Arnot, that was, was guest of honor at a "Quilting Bee" at the Congregational parsonage, Saturday evening. The Misses Fablinger, Lawrence, Vineyard, Sykes and Atkinson, Mesdames Sykes and Atkinson were present.

The High School team redeemed itself at Los Gatos Monday in a most decisive manner by defeating that team by a score of 6 to 1. The Campbell boys have the goods if they will but deliver them at the proper time. Once again.

Rev. and Mrs. P. Madsen and three children, who have just returned from China where Mr. Madsen was in mission work, visited their old friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hagelin the first of the week. They have gone on to Minneapolis to live for a time.

DINNER ON MOVING DAY

EXCELLENT MEAL MAY BE PREPARED IN ADVANCE.

Easy to Pack Everything That Is Required and Have Suit Case Handy Against Day of General Discomfort.

The ideal arrangement on moving day or in housecleaning time, so far as the culinary end of the household is concerned, is to take dinner out. Sometimes a kind-hearted friend steps into the breach with an invitation to dinner; sometimes a nearby hotel or restaurant suggests itself as a solution of the difficulty. Sometimes, however, dinner at home is a necessity. And if it is there is no reason why it should be the unsavory, inhospitable meal it sometimes is.

A moving day dinner can be packed in a suit case. It can be prepared the day before, packed the morning of the move, labeled and placed carefully in pantry, kitchen or dining room of the new house, and opened five or ten minutes before time for serving.

The suit case should be stored with plates, cups, silver, napkins and tablecloth, candles and matches—often the gas and electricity are not on tap the first night—and, if the mover have one, a chafing dish and a percolator. All these things can be placed the day or the week before. A bottle of alcohol for the spirit lamps should be added on moving day, with a bottle of cream, a loaf of bread, a package of ground coffee, a pat of butter and such food as has been planned and prepared. The doilies or cloth can be spread on tables set up anywhere, or even on packing boxes, the candles lighted, coffee made in the percolator, one or two hot dishes prepared in the chafing dish, the cold food served, and in ten minutes a feast fit for a traveling gypsy king can be ready.

Soup served in cups, cold veal loaf, creamed potatoes, currant jelly, vegetable salad, ice cream, coffee, cheese and biscuits can constitute a suit case spread. The soup, made the day before, can be carried in a large fruit jar with rubber and screw top, or else it can be bought in a tin and opened, when it is warmed in the chafing dish, and while the diners are eating it the creamed potatoes, prepared the day before and kept on the ice and carried in a fruit jar, can be heated. The veal loaf made the day before can be wrapped in a napkin or waxed paper, and the jelly naturally travels in its own glass. Lettuce for the salad, washed and pulled apart, is wrapped in a wet cloth and then in waxed paper. The vegetables—peas, beans and diced carrots—can be packed, dressed with oil and vinegar, in a small glass jar. A box of biscuits and a cake of cheese also find place in the suit case. Ice cream, ordered delivered at the new house, makes an easy dessert.

German Dumplings.

Take the crust from three or four small rolls and cut the crumb in small pieces. Put into a basin, pour boiling milk over them and soak for twenty minutes. Press to drain off superfluous milk, put in a saucepan and beat over the fire with a spoon until hot. Set back and season with salt and pepper. Cut one-half pound of bacon in small pieces and fry with some of the crusts cut in dice. Mix fried crumbs and bacon with soaked bread; add five ounces of butter in small lumps and enough beaten egg to bind the mixture without making too soft. Divide in equal sized masses, roll evenly round, flouring the hands freely. Plunge into a saucepan of salt boiling water and cook ten minutes without uncovering. Drain, put on a hot dish, pour over brown clarified butter and serve.

Oyster Canapes.

This is one of the simplest to construct, and also one of the most effective, of the flower decorations. Two rounds of bread, which have been sauted in butter on one side only, are spread with an oyster mixture made from six large oysters, one tablespoonful of capers, and the same of pimento, chopped fine; add one tablespoonful of horseradish, salt, and a dash of cayenne pepper with mayonnaise to form a thick paste. Strips of the whites of hard-boiled eggs are cut in slender petals with a sharp pair of scissors and arranged about a yellow center, in the shape of a daisy or chrysanthemum.—Harper's Bazar.

Veal Croquettes.

Put two cupfuls of finely chopped veal in a saucepan, add two tablespoonfuls of fine bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of butter, the beaten yolks of two eggs, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one saltspoonful of paprika and spec of mace. Stir the mixture over the fire until thoroughly heated, then set aside to cool. Shape into croquettes, dip in beaten egg, roll in fine crumbs, let stand one or more hours and fry until well browned. Serve with tomato sauce.

Green Pepper Sandwiches.

Remove seeds and white lining from sweet green peppers, wash them and put them through the meat grinder. Mix them with cream cheese and moisten with cream. Spread on unbuttered white bread.

THAT GARDEN GOWN

Cousin Bess Managed Eveiyn's Love Affair With Consummate Policy.

By ELLA C. WILSON.

"O, Bess! My Dearest Cousin Bess: Now read with all your eyes, for I have just the divinest scheme! I am always provided, as you will admit, with a passable wardrobe. You, also. Well, my wardrobe allowance has reached the vanishing point with the season half over! I am bored to death with every identical article of appearel. Now I'll be willing to wager a box of candy that things are in exactly the same state with yourself! Now then! Being a responsive spirit you have already penetrated my thought and assented thereto! Yes, we are to exchange gowns! The scenes of our respective dramas are so far apart that our strategy will be safe! Let us begin with our most fetching gowns. You remember that rose-colored one I wore to the Al Fresco lunch when you were here? I'll send you that. It is simply a dream. You will be irresistible in it! Now you send me something bonny and bewitching for the archery lark we are to have on the 19th. Afterwards we can keep it up ad infinitum."

With a few more rhapsodies, and exclamation points and confidences, Evelyn finished her letter and ran out and posted it.

Now, Lawrence Liscomb, the most "eligible" and the handsomes of Evelyn's "set," had utterly lost his head to this little butterfly. He spent all his leisure trying to induce her to consent to his "interviewing her parents," while she employed all her charms in endeavoring to convince him that she was far too young and foolish to know how to think the least bit about such things. Lawrence was coming to see her that evening, as he generally did come seven times or so per week. To enhance her eloquence in trying to put a stop to Lawrence's "teasing her so," Evelyn dressed that evening in her most bewitching style. Nevertheless, they quarreled that night. They often did quarrel, indeed, but this time it promised to be really final, for when Lawrence went away he said with great solemnity:

"I shall not ask you to marry me again for a whole month!" and he immediately added, in the tone of a judge delivering a death sentence: "I shall not even see you—unless you send for me." Then, with his best and deepest society bow, he stalked rapidly away.

Evelyn listened to the firm, determined click of his step on the pavement till it died away, then she softly closed the door and gasped. He couldn't do such a thing! Yes, he could; he was a man! He could do anything! But he wouldn't! He might, though! She returned to the parlor and gazed upon herself in the full-length mirror. She shook her little fist at her pretty double and muttered:

"You are a lovely creature, you just are! But you are a little idiot! You don't know a good thing when you have it! He's perfectly splendid!"

Evelyn didn't care for the clothes any more! What was the use of them anyway? She went straight to her room and sat down to her rosewood desk to let her cousin know that, after all, she didn't want her "old things;" she had changed her mind. She tore up half a dozen sheets in attempts to set it down with decent dignity, and finally decided to be kind to Bess and go on with the plan for her sake. Probably Bessie still cared about clothes! In this benevolent frame of mind she went to bed and cried herself to sleep. She didn't do it hastily, but with sufficient leisure—that she might as long as possible enjoy her sweet carnival of tears. The first thing in the morning she sent Bessie the garden gown and hat.

Of course Evelyn scarce looked at the letter or gown which Cousin Bessie sent her in response to her scheme. For almost a week she passed long, long, weary days and nights, alternatingly "not caring a bit what he does" and being sure "she couldn't possibly live without him." At last a letter from Bess electrified the situation. The letter ran as follows:

"Who is Lawrence? O, Evelyn! Evelyn! What have we done? But I managed it, as mamma would say, with consummate policy. You do exactly as I direct and all will be well. You may trust me absolutely. I am older than you. (She was six months older.) I have done all for your good. But I will tell you the story from the beginning.

"We have just come in from one of our festivals on the lake. There were three boat loads of us. We were at our merriest when we overhauled a knight of the paddle, a stranger enjoying in his canoe. As we passed him singing the Lorelei in our most sentimental fashion, he rested on his paddle and stared at me as if dazed. I had the forward seat in our boat, and the light of the bow lantern was on me as well as the brilliant moonlight, but you may never again tell me that love is blind! The knight took two or three strokes as though he would approach and accost me, then suddenly turned his canoe about and disappeared swiftly down the lake. You may be sure I had to endure a good deal of chaffng. They all declared that I had bewitched the man with my dazzling new gown, which, by the way, seems to have been the literal truth.

"I cannot tell you how deliciously romantic it was! But it turns out all prose for me. The poetry of it is yours! An hour or so later a small boat made its way up the lake at life and death speed, and made directly for the bow of our boat. The youngster who was rowing the same, handed me a letter and disappeared again as swiftly as had his chief before him. In the light of the lantern I could see that the letter was addressed to you! After all, love is blind, for that Lawrence, whoever he may be, had been deceived by the gown—as you will see.

"Once in the privacy of my own room I had to decide what to do with the letter. If I forwarded it to you, it would be too late to act! I inclose the letter. Stop right here and read it before you finish this."

Evelyn had, of course recognized the handwriting of "the inclosed;" but now she obeyed her cousin and read it again, this time understandingly.

"O! Evelyn, My Darling: (And Bessie's eyes had looked upon that!) I cannot resist. I must break my vow. Just once more I plead. That dear, familiar, ravishing gown! The quaint turn of your dear, golden head which no one one earth is capable of except your own precious self! (Indeed!) Do not think I followed you up. I did not even know that you ever came to this town. Darling, you and I will never be able to forget. Write me one of your adorable little letters and tell me where I may meet you—alone. You must let me see you just this once more; then I will go away to Japan or any outlandish place you want me to! Only, Evelyn, you will say "Stay," won't you? You can, you must. I shall call at the postoffice every hour till I hear from you," etc., etc.

Evelyn's fever ran higher and higher every time she read this very ordinary lover-epistle. At last she happened to remember that she was reading a letter from Cousin Bess. She returned to it languidly.

"Now I am supposing that you have read the letter. Isn't it a document? (A document! Humph!) You see, I positively couldn't allow you to drive to despair and perhaps to death, so chivalrous a suitor. I am sure I have acted for the best. I got out your last letter, copied your handwriting. (The thing) I told him simply that I (or was it you?) was going home this morning, and woudd see him any evening he chose to call. It was the best I could do. I signed your initials, and then I actually posted that fraud of a letter. I did not put in any tootsie-wootsie, not knowing exactly how affairs stand. Otherwise, I would have. Now you be at your prettiest every evening till he calls—and you won't have to wait long after he gets my letter! Yours in an agony of suspense,

"COUSIN BESS."

Cousin Bess did not have to dwell long in her agony of suspense. Half an hour later, fancy free, she was so occupied building airy castles in Spain that she never heard the loud ringing at the door-bell. She didn't notice anything at all, indeed, until some one rushed in through the parlor and made real some of her castles by snatching her in his arms.

Explanation was impossible. That infatuated boy would have none of it. He stopped her every time—in his own way, and finally exclaimed impatiently:

"Confusion to explanations! It's all right as it is!"

Scientists' Record of Time.

Each fossiliferous rock bed contains characteristic form or groups of forms that determine the period in which it was mud or sand. Former Director Powell of the United States geological survey once tersely explained to a congressional committee the value of paleontology by saying that it is "the geologist's clock," by which he tells the time when rock beds were formed. The economic importance of paleontology has been repeatedly shown in this country. In the earliest exploitation of anthracite coal thousands of dollars were fruitlessly expended in New York in search of coal beds until the New York geologists showed that the beds in that state could contain no coal. The fossils in the rocks exploited are Devonian, whereas the fossils of the Pennsylvania anthracite coal beds belong to the carboniferous, a much later period. This discovery at once stopped a useless expenditure of money.

Fight Between Rooks and Seagulls.

A Dover correspondent reports a curious incident which was seen at a farm at Elms Vale, on the confines of the borough. A flock of seagulls, flying inland, had taken possesion of a newly sown field, and were pecking away contentedly, when a still more numerous flock of rooks swooped down and attacked the gulls. The rooks being about two to each gull, flapped and rushed the gulls until they withdrew to a field some distance off. The victorious rooks then proceeded to enjoy themselves in the newly-sown field, having first set what were apparently sentries along the side of the field.

It was amusing to watch these sentries hustling away any gull which strayed too near. It has been noted by naturalists that this setting of sentries is in accordance with the habits of rooks.—London Telegraph.

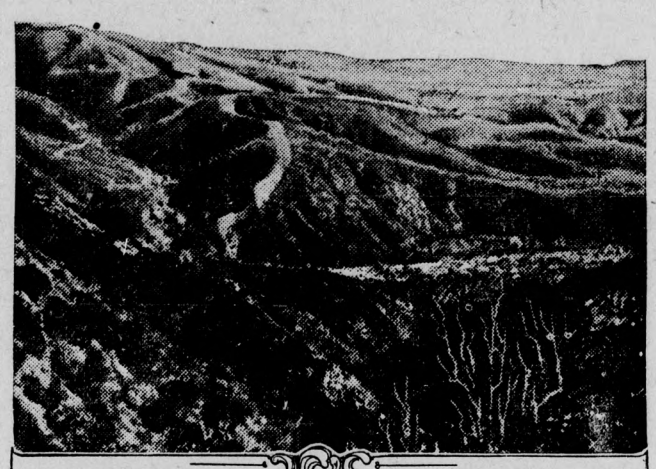
The Distinction.

"Actors certainly mix things up in the way they talk."

"How so?"

"When they are a long time at one stand, they call it a run."

To the Top of Grayback



DISTANT VIEW of GRAYBACK

It was a clear, bright morning when they started—the Tall Girl, the Book Girl, the Ordinary Girl and the Man. The lure of the mountains was strong upon them, the ranges beckoned them to come and see; so they set their faces toward old Grayback, and obeyed the call of the hills.

The four had three humble but useful companions in the shape of burros. Poor old Jerusalem carried the camping outfit, and the Book Girl rode Fritz. The Ordinary Girl's animal possessed no name at starting, but after half an hour's experience with him she decided to call him Epaminondas, for he didn't have "the sense he was born with." The Tall Girl and the Man scorned burros, and had chosen to walk, thus leaving themselves free to make derogatory remarks about Fritz, Jerusalem and Epaminondas.

The road wound through pines and cedars and oaks between the Yucaipa and San Barnardino ranges. The morning air was cool and fresh, and the Four regarded with sympathy the frisking of the big gray squirrels and the little striped chipmunks.

The Real Climb.

Soon the Vivian Trail was reached, and then began the real climb. Over Mill creek the trail led, and then up in a seemingly endless zigzag against the side of the mountain. Twisting back and forth, they went up and around and then down, until the Four heard the sound of water, and came out into beautiful Bluejay canyon. The pines reared their stately trunks as if trying to outdo the mountains themselves in height, while through their midst ran a clear mountain stream, bordered on either side by brake and lemon lilies.

The Four rested here, and when the Man went on to examine the trail, the girls gathered lilies—lilies with eight and ten fragrant cups along the stem, and the stems themselves taller than the Ordinary Girl.

The Man came back, and led them around a great fallen tree, and up a narrow winding trail, past clumps of thistle poppies, through ferns and columbine and pentstemon and lilies, until they came out into a great stretch of pines. The trees stood along the trail in ones and twos and threes, throwing their shadows on the gray, rocky ground. Young, strong pines they were for the most part, with only here and there an old veteran bare and broken with its fight against Time, but not bent.

Then the trees gave way to brush, and the Four pushed their way through buckthorn and manzanita that did their best to hold them back from the ranges. Once past the brush, the trail again led upward, again the water and the lilies, and over all a purple blue sky, like a Maxfield Parrish picture, and away in the distance, the valley, and Old Baldy, with its streak of white, standing sentinel at the head of it.

The trees were gradually growing smaller and more stunted, and presently they came upon some not erect at all, but bent over and crouching close to the ground for protection from the cruel winds, and then they were at timber line.

Above them was not a sign of a tree, nothing but bare, gray rocks, away up to the summit so appropriately called Grayback.

It was all very beautiful, but the Four were more alive just then to the call of hunger than to the call of the mountains. A fire was quickly made, and soon they were enjoying soup and sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee, that were as the Man said, "just bully."

Great Red Ball.

Then once more the mountains called, and the party climbed a small knoll and perched themselves in a flattened tree to watch the sunset.

Behind them was the topmost ridge of Grayback, with San Jacinto just across the way and the desert beyond; to the left was the valley in which Beaumont and Banning nestled, and before them the long cut between the ranges, with Baldy plainly visible, and beyond that, Mt. Wilson, and far off in the hazy distance the Pacific. The sun was a great red ball, slowly dropping down below Baldy. Lower and lower it went, until it was only a rim of red shining on Baldy's patch of snow. Then as the sun disappeared there instantly stole in its place a soft, pink light which deepened and spread until the whole western sky was aglow with rosy color. And as the Four turned to look at Grayback, lo! a miracle had taken place. The mountain's cold gray stones were softened and warmed by the same pink light, and even San Jacinto was touched by the transforming color. Little by little the wonder faded away, darkness came on, but not unattended, for up from behind Grayback rose the full moon.

At last it was time to start up the trail to the summit. The Book Girl and the Ordinary Girl elected to start first, for they were new to mountain trails.

The moonlight shone weirdly on the gray mountainside, the wind was cold, and the trail was steep and shady and hard to follow. Above them they saw a snowbank glistening in the moonlight, and knew they were not far from the top of the ridge.

Soon they came to the top, and stood there—for a moment only. The wind was blowing a gale, and almost swept them off the mountain. Breathlessly they dropped down behind some rocks, until, partly warm and with recovered breath, they were able to climb over the great boulders farther along the ridge toward the summit. It was bitterly cold, and the wind was against them. They crept over the rocks, large patches of snow, until in a short time they stood beside the pile of stones that marks the summit of Grayback. In comfortable places, away from the wind, they awaited the dawn of the new day.

The sky was dull and gray and forbidding, but soon in the east there crept up a faint rosy glow. Then pink streamers stole up into the gray sky, deepened in color, rose more rapidly, and over the mountain below Grayback came the great golden ball we call the sun. Its rays came streaming across the snow to the Four, and they watched peak after peak catch the light, saw that light steal away down to the vlley, and knew that a new day had begun.

In the morning light the Four looked far out to the desert seen the night before at timber line, saw the valley towns between the mountains, and everywhere range after range, clad in their wonderful grays and greens.

VARYING VIEWS OF BEAUTY

Gymnasium Professors and Artists Differ Widely on Point Long the Subject of Controversy.

The exultation of women over the appearance of numerous examples of the perfect form of the Venus of Milo in our colleges has been heard in London, and Sir James Linton, an artist of credit and renown, has met it with the brutal declaration that modern woman is degenerate from art forms. He has had many models. He has found them all warped more or less by the dress they wear and the shoes they suffer from.

As the reports of perfect women come from the directors of gymnasiums in our colleges we have here a controversy of experts. Is the gymnast that teaches a young woman to punch a bag and do a trapeze act a better judge of beauty than an artist who poses her to model a Venus? The gymnast resorts to measurements. He gives exact figures of height, weight, bust measure, hip measure, length of limb and the rest. "These," he says, "are almost exactly the same as those of the goddess from Milo; therefore the model girl must be as perfect as the ancient." But the artist does not measure. He sees, or misses, subtle curves and graces that are beyond the reach of the measuring tapes. He demands a beauty unwarped by corsets, a foot unsoiled by shoes. He doesn't find it. So while the gymnasiums are filled with ululations of triumph, the studios continue to sigh for a loveliness departed from the earth.—New York World.

CARE OF SETTING HEN

Nothing Will Dislodge Perfectly Hard-Working Matron.

Box or Barrel Laid on Side, Painted Inside With Carbolineum or Some Other Good Lice Paint, Is Suitable Nest.

(By PROF. JOHN WILLARD BOLTE.)

A setting hen is a perfectly respectable hard working matron, suffering from an acute attack of spring fever. She will not work, she refuses to lay or even talk about it, and she develops a very crabbed disposition in a remarkably short length of time. Seeking out some chosen nest she takes possession, by force, if necessary, and proceeds to occupy it for about 23 hours and 25 minutes every day. She leaves it secretly and in silence, only when food is necessary. Having satisfied her wants, she suddenly remembers that unguarded nest, and makes for it with great speed and confusion.

It matters not whether the nest contains eggs or a doorknob, it is dear to her, and nothing will dislodge her. There she will hold the fort until her motherly longing is satisfied in a brood of little downy peepers. The writer once hatched three successive broods of chicks under the same hen, the hen setting for 75 consecutive days, and coming off the nest reluctantly and in good health at the end of that time.

The best way to detect a broody hen is to look through the nests after dark and see whether there are any hens on them. If so, they should e[ither] be brought up or placed on s[ome] worthless eggs in the hatching qu[arters], as they do harm in the regul[ar] laying pens by partially incubati[ng] eggs and fighting with all the o[ther] hens.

Almost any concave nest, well lin[ed] with hay, will do for setting a he[n]. Take a box, or barrel laid on its si[de], paint it inside with carbolineum [or] some other good lice paint, and for[m] the nest out of earth with two inches of hay covering it.

Be sure to get the corners filled so that the eggs cannot roll into them. Have the edge of the box not ov[er] three inches higher than th[e] that the hen will not jump Dust the hen with insect po[wder] her on the nest on some d[ay] and cover her with another, box. Let her off in 24 hou[rs] she goes back again, it will put good eggs under her.

Use an odd number of eg[gs] ing upon the size of the h[en] season. Thirteen in cold w[eather] 15 in warm, is about r[ight] Plymouth Rock hen.

Keep whole corn and p[ure] hand and let the hen take self. The chicks usually hatch on the twenty-first day alone until the night of t[he] second day. Then move h[er] chicks to a warm, dry co[op] not feed the chicks until t[he] fourth day.

It is a good plan to se[t] hen at the same time and give all of the chicks to one hen after they are hatched.

SHEEP HELP ON MANY FARMS

Besides Being Money-Makers, They Will Destroy Many Noxious Weeds—Range Bred Best.

(By W. A. LINKLATER, Oklahoma Experiment Station.)

It would add to the revenue of many farms if a flock of sheep were kept. Besides being profitable they are great weed eaters. They will eat five out of six of our known weeds, where a cow or horse will eat only one out of every six.

Range bred sheep are the right kind for the average farmer to buy. Such sheep will be grade Merinos and if they carry a cross of Shropshire, Lincoln or other mutton blood, so much the better. It would not be advisable to buy Mexican sheep or low grade sheep of any other kind.

The ewes purchased for the foundation flock should be good, large animals from one to four years old, and weighing more than one hundred pounds. Where possible it would seldom be practical to start with less than 50 ewes, and a larger number would be better still. A flock of a dozen would require admost as much care as 50 or 100. These range bred grade Merinos should be bred to a Dorset ram if possible.

The reason we recommend buying range bred grade Merino ewes is that thousands of these are available, while Dorsets are not to be had in large numbers.

These fall or early winter lambs, by good feeding and care can be made to weigh 90 to 100 pounds by May 1, when they will find a ready market and will always be in demand. Such lambs should bring from five dollars upward.

That Wonderful Event

IF THERE is a time above all times when a woman should be in perfect physical condition it is the time previous to the coming of her babe.

During this period many women suffer from headache, sleeplessness, pains of various description, poor appetite, and a host of other ailments which should be eliminated in justice to the new life about to be ushered into this world.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

is a scientific medicine carefully compounded by an experienced and skilful physician, and adapted to the needs and requirements of woman's delicate system. It has been recommended for over forty years as a remedy for those peculiar ailments which make their appearance during "the expectant" period. Motherhood is made easier by its use. Thousands of women have been benefited by this great medicine.

NOT AN INVENTION

Chinese Knowledge of Gunpowder Result of Chance.

Admitted as Truth That the Nation Knew of the Explosive Two Thousand Years Ago, but Its Discovery Was Accidental.

Everyone knows that the Chinese claim the invention of gunpowder. It is declared by educated Chinamen that in the great and imperial records that have been accumulating at Pekin for so many hundreds and hundreds of years there is an account that proves the Chinese knew about and used gunpowder more than two thousand years ago.

Research has led to the belief, however, that the Chinese did not actually invent gunpowder, but discovered it through a series of peculiar accidents. Gunpowder consists of saltpeter, powdered charcoal and powdered sulphur, but just the powdered charcoal and saltpeter will make a very good explosive.

Now throughout many of the great plains in both India and China there is found on the surface quantities of saltpeter. The men who have been making studies of this have finally come to the conclusion that doubtless the manner in which gunpowder was discovered was a simple accident.

Men camped on these plains, according to the claims of some experts, built fires and left here and there great spots of coals and charred wood from their campfires. The charred wood was nothing more or less than charcoal, and this in time was trampled down by cattle and horses and men crossing these plains, leaving finely powdered charcoal lying over the saltpeter plains.

In places where the saltpeter cropped out of the ground in larger and purer quantities there soon occurred a combination of saltpeter and powdered charcoal wherever campfires were made. Then other travelers across these plains stopped by the wayside and built their fires.

No doubt these travelers were at first frightened and mystified to find that whenever they lighted their campfires there came flashes and explosions and puffs that sent smoke and fine cinders flying about them. Investigations in other spots led to the discovery that such explosions happened only where there was charred wood ground fine on the ground.

From this the deduction was simple, even two thousand or more years ago, and experiments soon led to the discovery of why these explosions happened. From all this it is claimed now that the Chinaman has really good proof that his people knew about gunpowder two thousand years ago.

An Angry Tree.

In Idaho there exists a species of the acacia-tree that a writer in Harper's Weekly says is entitled to be classed as one of the wonders of plant life. The tree attains a height of about eight feet. When full grown, it closes its leaves together in coils each day at sunset. When the tree has thus settled itself for its night's sleep, it will flutter violently if touched, and if you shake the branches it will emit a nauseating odor strong enough to bring on a headache.

In Idaho it is called the "angry tree," and it is said that it was discovered by some men who were making a camp for the night, and placed one end of a canvas covering over one of its sensitive branches, to use it as a support. Immediately the tree began to jerk its branches sharply. The motion continued with increased "nervousness," until at last there came a sickening odor that drove the tired men to a more hospitable campingplace.

Almost an Accident.

The old gentleman who came upon a badly dazed person in a by-street of London inquired—so the Daily Mail says—the cause of his agitation:

"My good man, what is the matter?"

"Matter, sir!" repeated the confused individual. "Matter, sir! Gen'l'man's 'oss run away with a brougham, sir—never see hanything like it in all my life—down 'e comes the 'ill with the sharves a-drangling all about 'is legs—knocks a butcher's cart into a linen-draper's shop—bang against a carriage and pair, and smashes the panel all to bits—upsets a phaeton, and if 'e 'adn't a-run agin this 'ere cab an' dashed it right over an' stopped 'isself, blowed if I don't think there'd been an haccident!"

Gets Rheumatism Where He Wants It

Any One Can Now Cure the Worst Form of Rheumatism, Even Articular, Sciatic, and The Dreaded Neuritis.

This Plainly Shows How You Feel After Using S. S. S. It Surely Gets Rheumatism Where You Want it.

No more journeys to hot springs. No more salycilic acid. No more makeshifts, narcotics, opium, morphine, mercury, nor any other vile poisonous drug or pain deadener. The great discovery, Swift's Sure Specific, for aching bones and joints, nerve splitting pains in the muscles, backache, and every form of rheumatism, is the most remarkable remedy known to science.

It is naturally absorbed into your thoracic duct. In just about five minutes after it reaches your stomach, the heart begins pumping it all over your body.

Away Go the Crutches.

Its action is marvelous. Bedridden rheumatics get on their feet as if by magic. That cold, clammy sensation that made you hug a red hot stove is gone in a twinkling. That excruciating pain that made a feather lay as heavy as a ton of coal on the skin is gone. You get up and dance with glee. You metaphorically toss the rheumatic goblin into the invisible where. Your rheumatism is gone—absolutely! It is an actual logical fact that Swift's Sure Specific gives your entire blood circulation a fine, thorough bath. It just naturally and in a twinkling irrigates every atom in your body. It rushes into every cell, causes every bone, muscle, ligament, tendon, mucous surface and every nerve to thrill with freedom, with health, with new-found springiness.

And best of all, Swift's Sure Specific, though a powerful, searching, overwhelming enemy to pain and the causes of rheumatism is as pure as the dew on a peach blossom, as powerful as the heroic works of nature, as searching as the peremptory demand of the most successful science.

Is Truly a Wonder.

Swift's Sure Specific puts the tinge of red color to the cheeks; gives your nerves a new-found flush of joy; puts a glow of excitement into your muscles. No more Sciatica; no more rheumatic sore throat; no more danger of Locomotor Ataxia; no more Iritis, Neuritis, or any other inflammatory condition that has laid so many low. Swift's Sure Specific is an extract, made and distributed from one of the world's greatest laboratories, and is one of the greatest remedies ever produced for any purpose.

Works Five Ways.

Swift's Sure Specific is such a thorough blood cleanser that it stimulates the lungs to burn up the poisons; causes the skin to evaporate great quantities of acids; flushes the kidneys and bladder to excrete the deadly toxins that cause uraemic poisoning; assists the liver to convert bad blood into good, rich, red blood, and enables the bowels to move out of the system the waste that has been a daily menace to life. Don't wait another day before beginning this remarkable remedy.

You will find it on sale at any drug store at $1.00 per bottle. Ask for S. S. S., the world's cure for rheumatism. For private, personal advice on stubborn chronic rheumatism, write at once to the Swift Specific Company, 132 Swift Building, Atlanta, Georgia. Their medical department is famous on all blood diseases, and is equipped to make personal blood tests, approved by the highest medical authorities. Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day. Then—away goes rheumatism for all time.

The Gecat American Paganini To Play

AT CAMPBELL, MAY 15, 1913

Carl Lanzer Classed Among The Truly Great

Carl Lanzer, New York's World Famous Violinist and Great Violin-Maker, who won the Sobriquet of the Great American Paganini while traveling in Concert with the late singer Ilma Di Murska,—is really to favor Campbell music lovers with one of his Grand Violin—Recital's and Concert.

'Lanzer is not the greatest Violinist that ever lived'—No. But he is as great as any of the greatest—he has been fairly lionized and applauded in New York and Boston.

This marvelous virtuoso of the violin—who has caught the public fancy with the style and go of his performance seems to fascinate his hearers which are numbered by the tens of thousands today—and whose technical difficulties cause him the least exertion will play for us and offers us a program—a varied one—from the highly classical to the world loved old Folk Songs—so all tastes will surely be satisfied.

This will be the last opportunity we shall have of hearing this artist, the most remarkable Violinist since the days of Ed. Mollenhauer—Ole Bull—Remenyi—Wilhelmj—and Wm. Withers in Lanzer we see a genuine genius—one of those rare artists, whose gifts have been bestowed upon him by providence—with gifts and accomplishments that the most profound study cannot supply, and that is why Lanzer must be classed as truly great.

Lots will ask—if Lanzer is such a great artist why haven't we heard of him before—The Great Artists you will admit Can be counted on the fingers of one hand and——those you have never heard of are legion.

The New York Press says. Let no misguided "Easterner" labor under the delusion that the Pacific Coast Cannot Boast of a virtuoso capable of holding his own" among the world's greatest champions of cat gut and bone—Carl Lanzer the American—Paganini, is the man who holds up so brilliantly the reputation of the West. Challenging all his brother and sister artists in the wide world to match their powers with his at the San Francisco Fair in 1915.

The San Francisco Examiner says Carl Lanzer, the American Paganini, let it be known, was a violinist of prominence in the East as well as on the Pacific Coast long before either Elman or Kubelik were born. He is the only Virtuoso who makes his own violins and strings.

Miss Florence Smith will sing the at Lanzer Concert. Miss Florence Smith, the Los Gatos girl, is becoming very popular since making her debut at the last Lanzer Concert at the Gem City—and her Vocal numbers here will give great pleasure.

By all means don't miss this great musical event. Tickets now on sale at Mrs. Olmstead's.

EVERYTHING in Santa Clara is moving toward one great finale, the Cherry Carnival, May 15. Sure you're going.

MERCED County Editors have organized an association similar to Santa Clara County's with the get-together spirit uppermost. That's the candy!

THE heavy frost Sunday night did a great deal of damage to fruits in all parts of the valley and reports indicate that almost half of the crop has been injured, especially in the lower spots. In some cases the loses by frost will lessen the expense of thinning which is now in order. Those who have fair crops this year will probably receive a good price for their product.

AT the Peace Congress now in session, David Starr Jordan and W. J. Bryan will speak Saturday. These gentlemen have both argued strongly against the alien land bill on the peace basis. The World's "Peace Day" has been set for May 18, as the anniversary of the first Hague Conference in 1899. Prof. Abbott of San Jose will address the union meeting Sunday evening on the peace movement.

MOUNTAIN VIEW has enacted a dog muzzling ordinance. That is a commendable act and one that should be in force in every village and hamlet. No one is immune from dog bite and children are always in danger. Mad dogs are being killed almost daily in various parts of the country and as warm weather begins here the chances for rabies is much greater. Any sensible man who owns a dog should muzzle it, for his and his neighbor's protection. The necessity of such an ordinance is another argument in favor of a town organization. In-as-much as no ordinance of that kind effects Campbell and vicinity let every care be taken that the infection does not gain a foothold here. Watch your dogs.

"IF at first you don't succeed try, try again." On that old adage Suunyvale will hold another election to vote bonds for a new school building much needed. On April 12th the bond issue failed to carry, now the Board is at it again. That's the kind of "pep" that wins. We are reminded by this that Campbell needs a new science and manual training department building aud assembly hall. Let us not be outdone by our neighbors in the necessary things of the community. Let us get busy and vote for the construction of this building and have it completed before the commencement of school next fall.

THE Big Basin Highway is assured. The bill carrying an appropriation of $70,000 for its construction from Saratoga to and into the Big Basin Park has passed in both houses and its finish is assured. This is a part of the State highway system and work on. This is expected to be commenced soon. This is the best piece of booster legislation, that the present session has milled out and Santa Clara valley is to be the gate way for the state park and the opportunity should be grasped at once. Campbell, so near to the entrance of the mountain road at Saratoga should get busy and see to it that our share in the opportunity is not lost. The extension of Campbell avenue should be made due west to the Saratoga road and the property along this extension will be greatly enhanced by this new road and its proximity to the State highway.

The Home, or the Street?

There is a mode of life among some of the people in our larger cities that is being aped to some extent in our smaller ones. It is a habit of eating in public, talking loudly and seeking attention, overdressing in cost and underdressing in modesty, scoffing at conservative conduct, sleeping in a house and living all over the town, getting more fun out of spending than out of earning, living each day as though there were no tomorrow.

In men it makes them abandon temperance for excess, speculate instead of invest, want to make more so they may spend more, wish to get rich quickly instead of acquire a competence surely, to esteem notoriety above reputation, to live in the world instead of in the home. In women it makes them disdain the nobility of motherhood and the duties of the housewife, to look upon marriage not as an institution but as a gratification, to put beauty of appearance above beauty of character, to mistake excitement for pleasure. In both it makes selfishness supreme and aids the immoral and inspires the extravagant.

It is a tendency to be combatted both in ourselves and in those whose well being we hold dear. And it is best combatted by that institution known as the home. The more attractive the home, the less attractive the street. The greater the home influence, the less the intluence of the world. The more comfort, the less desire for luxury.

If you could trace the lure of the lights to its source you would find it in part at least in the rented house, the home that is occupied without the sense of proprietorship or permanence, the home that is a physical convenience instead of a mental retuge.

The real home, the home that will keep the daughter out of the cafe and the son out of the resort, is the home that is owned. And the father who builds a home builds more than a house. He builds character in his children and competence in his age. He makes himself happier, his children better, his town bigger and brighter. He performs a greater service to the world than the statesman or the warrior and a greater service to himself than he can in any other way.

If Canada Had Been Ceded to Us.

But for the wisdom of George Washington and Benjamin Franklin England would have ceded Canada to us at the close of the Revolutionary war. Washington and Franklin knew that if Canada had been ceded to the colonies France, from which Canada had been wrested some twenty years earlier, would have demanded that country as indemnity for the expense she was put to in the war for our independence. With the French flag restored in Canada it would have been a matter of a very short time when we would have been at war with France, and to save us from defeat there is nothing more certain than that we would have appealed to England. The aid would have come, and come swift and irresistible, and the chances are we would have returned to our allegiance to the crown of England, for it was years between the treaty of peace and the formation of the Union, plenty of time to get into a quarrel with France over some dispute as to boundary or fishing.—Washington Post.

Why Gold Is a Precious Metal.

Pure or fine gold will stand any test it may be put to in comparison with other metals. It can be rolled or hammered, extending it in any direction, until it becomes transparent. It can also be drawn into a thread as fine as human hair. It melts at about 2,000 degrees F., and, though it may be kept in a molten state for an indefinite time, it loses none of its weight, even should the heat be increased. The color is unaffected by air, water or heat and will stand any test of oxidation. No simple acid will dissolve or attack pure gold. In conjunction with silver gold is the first metal with which man became acquainted and is the most valuable by reason of the vast number of uses to which it is put. It is found in almost every country in a metallic state and nearly always in crystals. The old Egyptian symbol for gold signified divinity and perfection. The chemical term used today is aurum.—New York Press.

Let us make this town either bigger, or better, or both.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has preven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
